College campuses are flashpoints for First Amendment clashes. Protesters, employee complaints, academic freedom, invocations, religious clubs, school newspapers, Facebook, blogs, cell phones, use of campus mailboxes - what can a college regulate, and when? How does technology affect the right to regulate speech? Our attorneys have extensive experience in litigating First Amendment issues, as well as drafting policies and procedures that have helped colleges more effectively regulate these issues as they arise, and they are in a unique position to provide guidance and solutions to colleges regarding these challenging matters.

Who Should Attend? Managers, Supervisors, Administrators
